Overview

The Office of the Chief Medical Examiner is located in the Health Sciences Centre, Prince Philip Parkway, St. John's. Independence of the Office of the Chief Medical Examiner is heightened and enhanced through the employment of the Chief Medical Examiner as a Full Professor in Memorial University of Newfoundland's Faculty of Medicine.

Administrative support is provided by an Administrative Officer with additional clerical support provided for a portion of the year. Files related to the investigations conducted by the Office are presently stored at the central office in St. John's for the previous five years. Older files are stored off site.

During the calendar year 2011, the Office of the Chief Medical examiner investigated 445 deaths that were reportable under the Fatalities Investigations Act, Chapter F-6.1, SNL 1995. For fiscal year 2013-14 the Government of Newfoundland and Labrador budgeted $663,000 for expenditures associated with the Office of the Chief Medical Examiner.

During 2011, the Chief Medical Examiner received 15 requests from police jurisdictions for examination. In 14 cases the bones were of animal origin, and in one case the bone was of human origin.

The Office of the Chief Medical Examiner also reviews all requests for cremations in the province. During the year 2011, the Office reviewed 1475 requests for cremations and issued the appropriate permit.

The Chief Medical Examiner also reviews certain non-fatal trauma cases. This occurs at the request of the police or crown attorneys for an analysis of trauma. During the year 2011, the Chief Medical Examiner reviewed 6 non-fatal trauma cases.

The Office also provides statistics to various organizations regarding specific causes or manner of death. In 2011, the Office of the Chief Medical Examiner provided detailed information on the following:

Report on Activities

Issue 1: Compliance with Fatalities Investigations Act

The Office of the Chief Medical Examiner responds to reportable deaths as defined by the Fatalities Investigations Act. The response to a particular death is dependent upon the circumstances of the deceased's health, level of health care at the time of death and the suspected cause of death. Some cases may involve a review of information submitted by a medical examiner, a post-mortem examination or the assistance of a Forensic Anthropologist. The focus of the Office of the Chief Medical Examiner is consistent over the three years covered by the plan. The Office of the Chief Medical Examiner will report on the results of this objective again in 2013-14.

Objective 1: During the timeframe 2011-14, the Office of the Chief Medical Examiner will have responded to deaths that are reported in accordance with the Fatalities Investigations Act.

Measure: Responded to reported deaths

Indicators	Results
Conducted file reviews of medical examiner's reports	445
Ordered and/or conducted post-mortem examinations, as appropriate	140
Ordered and/or conducted autopsies, as appropriate	215
Recorded and reported on cause of death	445

Opportunities and Challenges Ahead

Since the implementation of the Fatalities Investigations Act in 1996 the number of deaths reported has declined from 703 in 1997 to 445 in 2011, and remains fairly consistent at this level. This decline was expected given that the criteria for reporting deaths is better defined than it was under the Summary Proceedings Act, the regime for reporting deaths is clearer, and knowledge of the Fatalities Investigations Act has increased. Under reporting of deaths does occur, particularly in unnatural deaths that occur in health facilities and deaths that occur from workplace exposure, especially in cases where there is a time span between the incident and death. Educational sessions are provided to senior medical students as part of their curriculum in an effort to address these issues.

The requirement for toxicological analysis on deaths investigated by the Office of the Chief Medical Examiner increased during 2011, with 76 full toxicological screens being performed in 2011 compared to 68 in 2010, 45 in 2009, and 44 in 2008. It is expected that toxicological analysis will continue to be an important facet of death investigations given the prevalence of drug usage in society. The appearance of designer drugs in society is also placing demands on toxicological services. As of May 2013, the Office of the Chief Medical Examiner will include the detection of the designer drug called “Bath Salts” in routine drug screening. The number of synthetic marijuana analogs are so numerous that routine screening is not practical at this time.

The Office of the Chief Medical Examiner is not required to provide a separate audited financial statement.
